Beware of Typhoid Fever, Vacationists Warned

"Beware of the danger of typhoid fever on your vacation."

This warning is contained in the weekly report of the Health Department, in which attention is directed to the fact that of the thousands of persons who remained in Washington during June, July, and August of last year, only 100 were reported as having contracted typhoid fever. Of the relatively few who went away, thirty-six contracted the disease. Unless unusual precautions are being taken this year, the report states, there will be the same prevalence of the disease among vacationers.

Typhoid fever vaccination is recommended as the safest way to obtain immunity from the disease.

Concerning the way in which it is contracted the report says:

"The undue prevalence of typhoid among vacationers may be attributed in part to unusual susceptibility to the infection, infection in diet, and so on. Polluted water used for drinking and bathing, infected food and particularly infected milk, uncleanly methods in the kitchen, and the presence of typhoid carriers or of persons suffering from typhoid are, however, the direct sources of infection."

Against all of these conditions, anyone on guard. A few intelligent inquiries of the proprietor and of the local board of health before engaging accommodations and a reasonable amount of rational observation after arrival should indicate the extent to which there is danger and point out the remedy.

"Ordinarily one who has observed sources of possible infection by typhoid fever will promptly seek some other location. He may, however, not find such sources of danger even though they exist, or circumstances may prevent an immediate retreat. For such persons, and they may constitute a large part of those who leave the city for summer vacations, safety lies only in personal immunity to the disease, and this can be acquired by any one through typhoid vaccination. The efficiency and safety of typhoid vaccination have been so thoroughly established in the experience of our army and navy that they are no longer open to debate. Without typhoid vaccination, from June to October, 1913, the Seventh Army Corps, at Jacksonville, Fla., with approximately 11,000 men, had nearly 2,500 cases of typhoid fever, with 200 deaths. With typhoid vaccination, from March to July, 1911, an army of 15,000 men on the border of Texas developed but one case of typhoid fever, and that patient recovered."

With typhoid vaccination, it is to be remembered, immunity to the disease is acquired through the use of a vaccine, one hardly likely to contemplate the possibility of infection in view of the naughtiness of the channels through which it necessarily comes."
